Ford, Giscard issue joint call for oil conference

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique (AP) — The presidents of the United States and France called jointly today for a conference of oil consuming and oil producing nations "at the earliest possible time."

The call was a compromise to break a French-American deadlock on how best to cope with increased oil prices. Presidents Ford and Valery Giscard d'Estaing agreed in summit talks on a series of "inter-related steps" leading to the proposed conference.

A communique issued as they ended two days of talks on this Caribbean island said these steps "should be taken in sequence."

—Consuming nations, working "within the framework of existing institutions," should develop programs for energy conservation, for developing existing and alternative sources of energy and for financial solidarity.

—Consumer nations should hold a meeting next March "to develop an agenda and procedures for a consumer-producer conference."

—The preparatory discussions among consumer countries "will be followed by intensive consultations" to prepare a unified position for the meeting with the exporting countries.

The communique did not set a date for a conference between the oil exporters, mostly in the Middle East, and their customers: the United States,

Japan and France and other countries of Western Europe.

But it appeared there would be a push to hold the meeting late next spring or early summer — a timetable suggested by qualified sources as the two presidents negotiated a resolution of their differences on energy policy.

Before the Martinique summit, France had been pressing for an immediate consumer-producer conference. The United States contended such a meeting should not be held until the importers agreed on a joint negotiating position.

To reach the compromise, both presidents yielded ground. Ford agreed that a consumer-producer conference should be held as soon as possible, and Giscard d'Estaing approved the preparatory steps.

The communique covered these major areas in addition to energy:

Economy — The presidents and Common Market nations "must adopt consistent economic policies in order to be effective in avoiding unemployment while fighting inflation." They declared that "measures of a protectionist nature" should be avoided.

Gold — They agreed: "It would be appropriate for any government which wished to do so to adopt current market rates as the basis for valuation for its gold holdings." This would strengthen the world's existing financial framework, they said.

The communique said the talks also ranged over such trouble spots as the Middle East and Indochina but disclosed no major policy shifts.

Lower-level officials spent much of the night working on the communique, and the final Ford-Giscard d'Estaing session was delayed an hour because the document was not ready.

Giscard d'Estaing gave a state dinner Saturday night for his American visitor, and Ford responded with an "All-American" poolside barbecue Sunday night. A White House chef grilled New York strip steaks for the 44 guests. Sarah Vaughan flew from the United States to sing and received a kiss from President Ford for her performance.

Sadat calls Mideast a bomb about to explode

By The Associated Press
President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, warning that the Mideast is a bomb about to explode, says he is having contacts with President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to decide whether to continue the U.S.-led negotiations.

"If the Americans through their step-by-step approach can achieve progress or success, I welcome it," he said in an interview in Cairo on Sunday with an Iranian publisher.

If not, Sadat said, Egypt favors going ahead with resumption of the Geneva peace talks, as the Soviet Union wants. The United States thinks nothing concrete can be achieved yet in multilateral talks and prefers to continue private negotiations.

The president warned that immediate action is needed to defuse the tense Middle East. He also said he believed Israel has a nuclear capacity and added that Egypt would find a way to acquire such weapons if necessary, but would not be the first to use them.

His remarks to Tehran publisher Farhad Massoudi were made available to The Associated Press today.

Israeli leaders on Sunday rejected Egypt's latest announced terms for peace: a 50-year freeze on Jewish immigration to Israel, Israeli withdrawal to the borders prescribed by the 1947 United Nations plan for the partition of Palestine and establishment of a Palestinian state.

Premier Yitzhak Rabin said the demands made by Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy on Friday cast a serious question mark over Egypt's readiness to enter peace negotiations.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon told the Israeli cabinet the demands were absurd from start to finish and could not serve as a bargaining stance.

Sources in Cairo suggested that Fahmy's immigration stand was a bold attempt to break the impasse between the two countries. One informed source said the Egyptian government was in effect telling the Israelis: "Unless you accept the Palestine Liberation Organization, see how unreasonable we can be."

British okay to Richardson seen

LONDON (AP) — The British government said today it is formally studying Washington's nomination of former U.S. Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson to be the next ambassador to Britain.

Diplomatic sources here said British approval was virtually certain and that President Ford will formally announce the nomination later this month. Richardson's name then goes to the Congress for approval.

A Foreign Office spokesman confirmed press reports that Richardson's name had been put forward to succeed Walter Annenberg, a close friend of former President Richard M. Nixon who resigned the post last October after 5½ years as ambassador.

Richardson, 54, resigned as attorney general in 1973 rather than obey Nixon's order to fire Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Since his resignation he has been a $25,000-a-year project director for the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars at the Smithsonian Institution, and has toured the country giving lectures.

Only two of sextuplets still alive

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Another of the Lange sextuplets born nine days ago died early this morning, leaving only two of the premature infants left in their battle for life.

Dr. James Harrod said a boy, Jason, died at Valley Medical Center of respiratory failure. He was the youngest of the six infants and weighed the most at birth, 2 pounds 4 ounces. A normal baby usually weighs between seven and nine pounds.

Industrial landmark in Dixon toppling Freeman factory being razed

Demolition of one of Dixon's industrial landmarks has begun, and bricks from the structure will be used in the remodeling of the old Reynolds Wire building.

Workers from Mighell Construction Co., have begun dismantling the old Freeman Shoe Co. plant on West First Street.

This building was constructed in 1887 for manufacturing shoes and operated continuously until June 1 of this year, when it closed.

At one time The Telegraph described it as "the largest shoe factory in the world under one roof."

In 1887 Dixon was angling for new industry and a group of citizens interested C. M. Henderson in the First Street location.

Henderson, along with Fred A. Watson, a former Dixonite who was experienced in shoe making, told the Dixon group they would start a factory here if the city furnished the site and constructed a building.

The community, through subscriptions, raised $27,200 which bought the land and constructed the building.

In the 1930s, the factory was purchased by the Brown Shoe Co., St. Louis, and in 1937 the Brown company opened the cut-sole division, which is still operating on Jay Dee Avenue.

The factory was sold to the Freeman Shoe Corp. in 1939. The Freeman company was founded in 1921 and in 1962 merged with the H. O. Toor Shoe Corp.

Tom Mighell, owner of the construction firm, recently became owner of the plant and the site it sits on.

"The Freeman Co. had estimates for demolition which ranged from $35,000 to $48,000," he explained. "I acquired the site because I feel it has possibilities and I have a use for some of the materials in my salvage business."

Mighell said much of the brick is scheduled to be used in the remodeling at Commerce Towers (the old Reynolds Wire building).

"Because we have a use for the brick," he explained, "we're moving a little slower than usual on the demolition. If we weren't trying to save the brick, we'd knock the building down in a couple of days. Since we want the materials, we're pulling the building down so that the brick falls to the outside and the wood and metal to the inside."

Mighell said his immediate plans for the property, after the building is razed, is to be warehouse for his business. There are some other possibilities later, he added.

Italy ripe for military take-over

By HENRY J. TAYLOR

Ambassador to Italy John A. Volpe has secretly informed Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that NATO, the Common Market and the paraphernalia of cooperative arrangements developed in Europe since World War II faces unshingement by Italy.

Italian descendant, Italian-speaking Volpe, former governor of Massachusetts and Washington cabinet member, confirms that in this unshingement the Soviet Union is sitting in the catbird seat—the only conceivable gainer. And he reports to Mr. Kissinger that the USSR is working at it day and night.

Iron-fisted Moscow stooge Enrico Berlinguer heads the Italian Communist party (CPI), the largest in the Western world. Luciano Barca, likewise appointed by Moscow, is the CPI's chief economist and a member of its ruling Politburo. Ambassador Volpe describes both as what the Italians call "camaleontes," chameleons—one minute you see them clearly, the next you lose them in the undergrowth.

The CPI commands 27 per cent of the national vote. Ambassador Volpe warns that this can rise to 30 per cent in the next elections.

Including the Communists, there are eight major parties and an appalling 31 additional parties. There are so many parties that only the factional interests are represented; the Italian people are not represented at all.

As can the Communist party in France, Portugal, Greece, Japan and elsewhere, the CPI can always put tens of thousands of protesting demonstrators in the streets.

The CPI does not have—or need—a majority in the Italian Parliament. It has already achieved a blocking position there. Ambassador Volpe calls this Moscow's objective and it has been accomplished. No legislation whatever, he reports, can be passed of which the USSR disapproves.

The Reds likewise control the OGIL, Italy's largest trade union. For this and other reasons, Italy has been losing more man-hours through strikes and walkouts than any country in the world.

Moreover, the combined CPI and OGIL scatter dragon's teeth in soil well prepared to receive them.

Throughout all modern history it is obvious that nothing is so powerful in setting peoples' minds against authority, and the policies that govern ment represents, as inflation. Ambassador Volpe states to Mr. Kissinger that Italy's inflation rate is running at an annual rate of 25 per cent. He reports that in many stores prices have gone up 30 and 40 per cent in one year.

On Dec. 4, one third of Italy's workers stayed home in protest against the inflation.

As the inflation grows the vast, labyrinthine bureaucracy grows. So does the graft. Expeditors have developed. They are designated "spicciacconci." And most are what Italians call "bufalo solitario," always on the edge of the herd. They know which officials to bribe, who to contact for signing papers, etc. Their fee is whatever they can get. "Tolleranza"—live and let live—the spicciacconci say.

Ambassador Volpe feels that the showdown may come this spring. Most political parties seem to want to delay new elections until next year, but coup attempts can upset this. And he sees indications of a possible military take-over.

Italy has 94 provinces. The Carabinieri has outposts in every Italian and Sicilian town in the 94. It is a ready-made arm for military intervention. The Forzarmade, in turn, is a branch of the army. It is directly under the minister of defense. The Forzarmade has access to arms and armor, most of which, incidentally, has been supplied by the United States.

Ambassador Volpe states that, clearly, the Italian people are fed up. The average Italian is a super-realist or he doesn't survive. Our Ambassador quotes the Italian saying that two things are necessary: policemen and music in the piazzas. But he is convinced that, above all, the Italians want a stable government.

Ambassador Volpe finds that millions look across the Adriatic and see this in the form of Tito's Red Yugoslavia. Others model their wants on the April 1967 military move in neighboring Greece.

Ambassador Volpe advised Mr. Kissinger that the predominant question is whether the NATO ally of ours, this Common Market member and integral part of the postwar paraphernalia of cooperative arrangements will face a revolution of unknown dimensions or experience a conceivable takeover by the Carabinieri, the Forzarmade and the Italian army.

West: Arab shopping list?

The money left over to the oil barons of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries after they have paid for all their imports, and for the harbors, oil refineries and other baubles being built in their countries for them by foreigners, is running at about $60 billion a year. That is about $7 million an hour, or $115,000 a second.

The world now has multibillionaires who every year could buy the entire wealth of the oil-created Rockefeller family 60 times over or buy all securities on the London stock exchange every nine months. They are not spending enough of their money, and are thus causing financial havoc. When they do spend more of it, they will cause a big political problem: how to come to terms with the Arab and Persian power that their ability to buy up Western businesses will bring.

A Beirut-organized consortium of Arabs, it is said, was last spring warned off by the White House from making a partial takeover bid for Lockheed Aircraft. Lockheed is in trouble with its TriStar airliner, but it is also America's largest defense contractor. Earlier this year Washington refused to allow the Iranians to invest in Grumman Corporation, another defense and space contractor which makes the Tomcat fighter the Iranians have been buying.

Even the Iranian offer to pay for restarting production of Lockheed's giant C-5A transport airplanes has aroused little enthusiasm.

What will happen when a multinational sheikh or shah wants to buy Quaker Oats or Coca-Cola, examples cited by Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve of companies whose acquisition would raise no storm?

Answer: many Americans will dislike it as much as the rest of the world has resented takeovers of their local companies by American giants ever since the war. When the Canadian Development Corporation bought America's Texasgulf, whose main assets were in fact in Canada, there was an outraged reaction in Congress.

Some involvement by the oil producers in Western industry would be no bad thing. For Kuwait to learn at first hand the problems of a car maker in a world of escalating gasoline priced from its new 14 per cent stake in Daimler-Benz is an education that can only be to the good. Or so Herr Helmut Schmidt is arguing after the Kuwait-Daimler-Benz deal recently; but even laissez-faire Germany is now pushing forward legislation to require government approval of such deals.

While the Arabs' advisers want them to buy good, profitable companies like Daimler-Benz, the oil-consuming countries would rather sell off the cash-hungry problem corporations. Anyone want to buy British Rail? With a bit of luck, direct ownership should lead to the sort of responsibility that rich men have to learn if they want to stay securely rich.

A more brutal, though unmentionable, reason for encouraging direct Arab investment is that it will provide a small bargaining hostage to fortune.

So far, the producers have spent little on direct investments, and have been careful to avoid going for complete control. Kuwait bought St. Martins Property Corporation in Britain—a company without a noisy workforce to contend with. But however eager the spender, it takes far more time to buy a multimillion investment than it does to earn the money to pay for it. It is when they start spending that the next round of political problems will begin.

If the Middle Eastern oil moguls get the taste for exercising the power of their purse, it will not be long before they could own great chunks of the industrialized world. It is a sobering thought that two years' worth of oil money surpluses would be equal to the entire sum of direct investments made over all the years by American corporations abroad.

Buddy, Can You Spare a Copec?
How many Copec-years (one year's worth of surplus cash of the OPEC countries equals $60 billion). OPEC-days (one day's worth equals $164 million) or Copec-hours ($6.8 million) it takes to buy:

All companies on all the world's major stock markets, 15.6 Copec-years.

Britain's entire personal wealth, 15.5 Copec-years.

An annuity of $232 a week for all male adult Arabs, 12.8 Copec-years.

New York stock exchange, 9.2 Copec-years.

All Britain's industrial assets, 6 Copec-years.

All central banks' gold at 1270 an ounce, 3.2 Copec-years.

All America's direct investments outside the U.S., 1.8 Copec-years.

London stock exchange, 0.6 Copec-years.

IBM, 143 Copec-days.

Exxon, 79 Copec-days.

Bank of America, 10 Copec-days.

The Rockefeller family's wealth, 6 Copec-days.

Once Lockheed C-5A, 8 Copec-hours.

Congress to toughen antitrust laws

WASHINGTON (LENS)—The need government officials feel, after the recent scandals, to prove that they have not been corrupted by business, combined with their equally great need to appear to be doing something about inflation, is producing great waves of talk about enforcing the antitrust laws. It is not entirely talk, as is shown by the new lawsuit designed to break up the giant American Telephone and Telegraph Company (owner of the Bell Telephone system and said by American authorities to be the world's largest privately owned business) into at least three separate companies, and maybe more.

Other lawsuits have been filed recently against major corporations that somehow attracted less attention and emotion than the AT&T suit, possibly because the telephone company has the largest number of shareholders, as well as the largest number of employees and the largest assets in the country.

Among the recent major suits is one charging eight of the biggest petroleum refiners (known as the Exxon case, from the name of the biggest) with a large variety of violations of antitrust law.

Other major antitrust suits of the past year and a half have been directed against the producers of such basic cost-of-living items as breakfast cereals and frying chickens and also against the manufacturers of automobile tires and the television networks.

All these lawsuits are as nothing compared with the antitrust enforcement actions that are promised, however. In particular, the Ford Administration is committed to the prosecution of antitrust offenses, such as price-fixing, which have an immediate and identifiable effect on the price level. Cases attacking the size and structure and economic power of a company, like AT&T, or of a group of companies, like the cereal-makers, are presumed ultimately to affect prices by reinstituting competitive conditions. But that assumption is hard to prove.

In addition, as a deterrent to price-fixing, the Ford Administration is backing legislation that would greatly increase the penalties for criminal violations of the antitrust laws, a category that includes price-fixing. For decades, the maximum fine that could be imposed on a corporation or an individual for an antitrust-law violation has been $50,000—plainly a tap on the wrist to companies with hundreds of millions, even billions, in profits.

The Ford Administration is supporting an increase in the maximum fine on an individual to $500,000 and in the maximum fine on a corporation to $1 million. In addition, the same bill would increase the maximum jail sentence for corporate officials convicted of criminal antitrust violations from one year to three, and would make such an offense a felony instead of a misdemeanor.

The purpose of the increased penalties, obviously, is deterrence. Officials hope their adoption will cause corporate officials to stop and think before engaging in a course of action that may violate the antitrust laws. At present, many corporate officials are said to feel that it is worth gambling on not being detected in antitrust violations when the penalty for being caught is a mere $50,000, when jail sentences are rare (only 41 people have been sent to prison in the 84 years since the passage of the Sherman Antitrust Act) and when little or no social stigma attaches to conviction for antitrust violations.

One of the first clues to the earnestness with which the Ford Administration is pursuing its antitrust program may be how hard a fight it makes—or fails to make—for these amendments in the short, post-election session of congress.

A bill containing the increase penalties and much more besides has passed both the House of Representatives and the Senate, but in very different versions. Only the House version contains the Administration's amendments. A compromise measure will have to be written for final approval by both houses of Congress, a task that promises to be difficult in the face of mounting business lobbying against the whole bill.

The principal section of the bill, other than the penalty section, is aimed at corrupt settlements of antitrust suits, like the settlement, alleged to have been corrupt, in 1971 of the case against the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation. This section originated in the Senate, not with the Administration. Among its provisions is a requirement that all contacts between corporate officials and government officials (except for those of company lawyers with the Department of Justice) be disclosed publicly at the time the case is brought to court for acceptance of the settlement.

What remains to be seen is whether President Ford and his assistants will fight the attempts of business to scuttle the whole settlement section of the bill and whether the Administration will—with or without the settlement provisions—put up a real fight for the stiffer penalties, which are also opposed by many businessmen.

Immunizing against gold bug

WASHINGTON (LENS)—World gold markets were thrown into a flurry, with significant distress selling, by the recent announcement by Secretary of the Treasury William Simon, that 2 million ounces of the 272 million ounces of gold in Fort Knox are to be sold by public auction on Jan. 6—six days after the Americans are to be allowed, for the first time in 40 years, to hold gold privately in any form they choose.

Simon may consider it a minor triumph that he sliced nearly $10 an ounce off the market price. On gold, as on some other matters, he has turned a half-circle these past two months. After having lulled himself into a belief that his compatriots would not rush to purchase gold bars on Dec. 31, he has worked himself into a neurosis that they will.

Simon's public explanation of the auction is that he wants to protect America's balance of payments from having to meet the gold rush by large new imports from South Africa. He said that the decision is in line with the American government's wish to demonetize gold.

The real question is whether in this new world of oil power, the gold in central bank vaults can be put to some sensible use. Italy, starved of foreign exchange, would like to find a way of selling some of its large store without unduly depressing the world price.

On one perspective, the overhang of official gold holdings looks huge, equivalent to 26 years of new supply. On the other hand, the Arabs, out of their stupors, could buy the lot (at $170 an ounce) in three years and the contents of Fort Knox in a mere eight months. If they got the gold bug, they could indulge it.

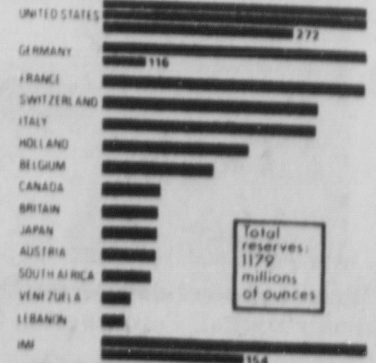

The Bank of Italy's Signor Rinaldo Ossola, who is also chairman of the deputies of the Group of Ten, the think-tank of world money matters, is flying his own kite. This is that the International Monetary Fund should sell its gold, not directly as the Americans have suggested, but by issuing medium-term bonds denominated in ounces of gold. The bond's selling price would be determined by the current gold price.

On maturity, in, say, five or seven years, the IMF would have to cough up gold at the going price.

Signor Ossola's proposal might override France's objection that IMF sales would depress the world price of gold, but the French still object that the gold in the IMF's vaults belongs to its members rather than to the IMF. Moreover, the IMF would be taking as much of a gamble as the bond-buyers.

SHORT RIBS

By DON OAKLEY

Is there an energy crisis or isn't there? Or was there ever one?

A survey last summer by the Federal Energy Administration found that 90 per cent of the people queried felt the energy crisis was either over, nonexistent or manufactured by the oil companies.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is among those who believe that drastic measures are needed to make Americans realize that there is, indeed, an energy crisis. Charging that President Ford's reliance on voluntary conservation is bound to prove inadequate, he calls for "a sizable tax on gasoline, or on imported oil or on automobiles according to their weight or horsepower" to discourage U.S. consumption of oil.

The energy crisis has "never been more serious," says William W. Boeschstein, president of Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp. He recently called upon the nation's architects, engineers and professionals in related fields to "alert the American people to the reality of the situation and mobilize them to take immediate defensive measures."

Boeschstein spoke at the third Owens-Corning Energy Conservation Awards dinner, the finale of an annual competition that recognizes architects, engineers and owners of buildings who have made advances in conserving energy.

Crisis is that no one believes it

On the one hand, there are grounds for confidence, he said. The nation's total use of energy is projected to decline this year for the first time since 1958.

But the negative side of the picture may well be stronger: Demand for imported oil began to swing upward again in September and consumption of Motor gasoline is running 25 to 30 per cent ahead of last winter.

The technology needed to do the job is already in existence, said Boeschstein. What is lacking is a sense of urgency, and the only ones who can create it are those who understand the problem—"who have a practical, working knowledge of how bad things really are."

Significantly, however, for the first time in the history of the awards, the judges found no winners in the industrial and commercial building design categories, which account for 70 per cent of the energy consumed in the United States.

If those who know "how bad things really are" are not yet possessed by a sense of urgency, little wonder that the rest of the population is going about the business of energy consumption pretty much as usual.

Antibiotics offer hope in treatment of acne sufferers

CHICAGO (AP)—There's good news and bad news for acne sufferers: The bad news is that it can't be prevented; the good news is that most cases can be effectively treated.

Skin specialists attending the annual meeting of the American Academy of Dermatology discussed at a news briefing Wednesday the latest treatments for acne, the curse of adolescence.

One of them, Dr. Albert M. Kligman, professor of dermatology at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, said "100 per cent of kids" have acne, ranging from a few pimples to severe cases.

It is said to be the most common problem seen in the dermatologist's office, and one beset by popular myth.

The latest development in acne treatment, reported by Kligman, is the application of antibiotic to the skin. Heretofore, antibiotics have been prescribed for oral use to treat acne.

Antibiotics taken internally, however, may result in undesirable side effects in some patients.

Kligman reports having successfully used the antibiotic erythromycin in combination with vitamin A acid as skin applications to treat acne.

Erythromycin relieves the inflammation of acne and vitamin A acid clears the pores, Kligman says, and adds that other antibiotics may also be effective.

Large amounts of vitamin A taken internally also are said to have some beneficial effect on acne, but taken over long periods of time they can have toxic effects.

"We don't want the vitamin nuts to go on a big kick now and use them in that way," Kligman said.

Dr. Samuel B. Frank, professor of dermatology at New York University, said applications of a cream form of benzoyl peroxide also are useful in treatment of acne.

And Dr. Peter E. Pochi, a Boston University dermatologist, said injections of steroids are helpful in treatment of big pustules of acne that do not respond to other forms of treatment.

Claims his device can save fuel

By WILLIAM RUMBLER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — An inventor says he can reduce your natural gas home heating bill by 40 per cent using a device based on a centuries-old scientific principle.

A local gas company questions his claims but a hotel chain is seeking to have it installed in three of its buildings. Inventor Gordon C. Berg said his device can be installed in any building.

"I control the temperature of the gas by reducing its kinetic energy," Berg explained Wednesday. "I don't change pipes. I don't change meters. I don't change a thing. I simply cool it."

The device works something like a food freezer. It fits onto the gas pipe before the pipe enters the meter and cools the gas to about zero degrees Fahrenheit.

The cold gas flows into the meter more slowly since there is less pressure, thus resulting in a lower meter reading.

Berg said the system is based on a principle discovered by scientists centuries ago.

Also, Berg said, gas molecules are stabilized at a cold temperature and burn more economically.

Dramatic cuts in heating costs resulted when he tested his devices at several homes in Indiana 15 or 20 years ago, Berg said, adding that he ended his experiments when the gas supplier found out what he was doing.

"This should have been done many years ago but now because of our so-called energy shortage it has to be done," Berg said. Robert L. Ingeman, vice president of Peoples Gas, Light and Coke Co., contradicted Berg's claim in part by saying that it doesn't matter what temperature the gas is, its cost is still the same.

He said his firm charges customers by the amount of thermal units used, not by cubic feet. The cubic feet reading on the meter is translated into thermal units, he said, by a formula that allows for temperature and humidity.

As far as stabilizing gas molecules goes, Ingeman said, there is no evidence to prove Berg right or wrong.

"If Mr. Berg can prove to us, to the world, that he can conserve gas by heating more efficiently, then we're delighted," Ingeman said, citing the natural gas shortage.

Berg said his freezing device can cut a gas bill by 40 per cent.

"Even if it saves 20 per cent, it's a hell of a thing," said Jerome Roth, executive vice president of IRMCO, a firm that owns a chain of area hotels.

Roth is negotiating with Peoples to have the devices installed in three of his retirement hotels.

A Sunday brunch delight

By AILEEN CLAIRE

A rich, pleasantly surprising dish for special guests combines Danish cheese, mushrooms and shrimp in a cream sauce. This is served as a filling in individual pastry puff rings along with asparagus spears and a favorite beverage. You may find a Cheese Puff Ring just the answer for something different to serve for Sunday brunches.

CHEESE PUFF RING

Pastry:
1 cup water
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
4 eggs
2 cups (8 ounces) grated Danish Esrom cheese

Filling:
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1-3rd cup flour
1/2 cups half and half
1/4 cup sherry
1 can (6 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
1 pound shrimp, cooked, shelled and deveined

In a saucepan heat water and butter to boiling until butter melts. Stir in flour all at once and stir until mixture forms a ball that leaves the sides of the pan. Remove from heat and cool. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in 1/2 cup of the cheese. Lightly grease a cookie sheet and with a finger mark an 8-inch in diameter circle on the cookie sheet. Drop egg mixture by heaping tablespoons on top of ring mark. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 45 to 50 minutes or until puffed and brown. Remove from oven and prick several times with the tines of a fork. Replace in oven and bake another 5 minutes. Cool on a rack.

To prepare filling, in a saucepan melt butter. Stir in flour. Gradually stir in half and half and sherry. Stir over low heat until sauce bubbles and thickens. Stir in remaining cheese until smooth. Stir in mushrooms and shrimp. Add salt and pepper to taste. Reheat until bubbly. Split puff ring into 2 halves. Place bottom half on a serving platter. Remove doughy strands of dough on the inside of ring. Spoon on hot cream and shrimp. Replace top of ring. Serve with asparagus spears and watercress. Makes 6 servings.

Tasty cheese puff ring.

Dear Ann

by Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: How do you like this? An acquaintance of mine who has been a successful attorney here in Oakland for several years started fooling around with a friend of his wife. Before long they were meeting every Thursday at a motel near the airport. He told his wife he had to leave town for a weekly business meeting. Someone put a bug in Wifie's ear and she decided to handle the matter in her own way. Last Thursday night she got in her car and followed her husband and his lady friend to the motel. She watched them check in, return to the car and drive to their room. They emerged soon after and she assumed they were going to dinner, so she waited till they returned two hours later—drunk as a pair of skunks. In about 20 minutes the lights went out.

The wife waited one full hour, then tapped lightly on the door. The woman, half-asleep, opened the door and nearly fainted. Her lover was snoring loudly in the background. The wife said quietly, "Unless you want real trouble, you'll get dressed and drive yourself home right now."

The other woman, scared out of her wits, scrambled in record time. The wife undressed and slipped into bed next to her husband. When he woke up the following morning and found her next to him he was too terrified to ask any questions. This story is all over town and I thought I'd share it with you as an example of how ONE woman dealt with the problem in California.—Oakland Reader

Dear Oak: Beautiful. Thank you for sharing. Dear Ann Landers: Right now my husband isn't speaking to me because of a disagreement we are having in regard to his parents. They sold their home and moved to a small apartment. It is their plan to have Sunday dinner every week with a child or another relative, but they never invite anyone to their place.

My husband says it's okay with him and I should have them over every three or four weeks whether we get invited back or not. I think it's rotten of him to put his parents ahead of me.

Our first argument was over my in-laws and I'll bet our last one will be, too. Please give me your opinion in this matter.—Wont Give In

Dear Girl: Your signature tells me more than your letter. And now here's my opinion, which will probably create more trouble than you had before you wrote, for which I apologize in advance.

I agree with your husband. Parents are special people and the same rules that apply to social friends do not apply to them.

Of course it's tacky of your in-laws to embark on a scheduled routine of freeloading without reciprocation. But for your husband's sake, you should agree to have them to and do it as graciously as possible.

Dear Ann Landers: I noted recently in our local newspaper that an obituary notice read "pallbearers will be funeral home personnel."

This seemed very sensible. People are living longer and older friends and relatives cannot lift heavy caskets. It worries me that when I pass on there will be few available pallbearers. Any suggestions?—No Name Please

Dear N.N.: My Funeral Maven tells me there are two kinds of pallbearers, active and honorary. When the contemporaries of the deceased are up in years, the actual lifting can be done by funeral home personnel and the honorary pallbearers can walk behind the casket.

It is sometimes customary for the "honorary" to wear white gloves and leave them on the casket as a symbol that they have served.

A Christmas gift in good taste

It's that time again to think of some nice little holiday sign of affection, some inexpensive, but thoughtful gift for neighbors and friends around town.

A homemade delectable is a great answer—such as Caraway Celery Sticks or Marinated Celery Vegetable Relish. Either one of these requires a couple bunches of celery, a half hour of your time and a day or two of marinating time. Either is a flavorful greeting which shows your appreciation of friendship, but needn't start a worrisome "exchange" of gifts.

MARINATED CELERY VEGETABLE RELISH

1 stalk celery
1-3rd cup salad oil
1/4 cup white vinegar
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 garlic clove, minced
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon marjoram leaves, crumbled
1/4 teaspoon thyme leaves, crumbled
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
2 cups sliced carrots
2 cups green beans cut into 1-inch lengths
1/2 cup stuffed green olives
1/4 cup sliced pimiento

Trim tops from celery. (Save for soups, stews, etc.). Separate celery into ribs; cut ribs into 1-inch lengths; set aside. In a large saucepan combine oil, vinegar, onion, garlic, salt, sugar, marjoram, thyme and black pepper; bring to boiling point. Add carrots, green beans and reserved celery; stir well. Return to boiling point. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 5 minutes. Cool. Stir in olives and pimiento. Spoon into jars or plastic containers. Cover and refrigerate at least overnight. If desired, pack into gift jars. Keeps well refrigerated for about 1 month.

YIELD: about 2 quarts

CARAWAY CELERY STICKS
1 stalk celery
1 cup thinly sliced onion
1/2 cup chopped parsley
1-3rd cup salad oil
1/4 cup white vinegar
1 tablespoon caraway seed
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground white pepper

Trim tops from celery. (Save for soups, stews, etc.). Separate celery into ribs; cut ribs into 3-inch lengths; cut each length into four 1/4-inch-wide sticks. Add onion and parsley. Combine oil, vinegar, caraway, salt, sugar and white pepper; mix well. Pour over celery mixture; toss well to coat. Cover and refrigerate at least overnight. If desired, pack into gift jars. Keeps well refrigerated for about 1 month.

YIELD: about 1 1/2 quarts
If you are keeping both eyes on your budget, remember that you can use every inch of a stalk of celery—the large outer ribs as a hot vegetable, the delicate inner ones as relish, the leaves as an excellent seasoner of soups, stews and sauces or a crisp and fragrant addition to tossed salads.

FOR THE ULTIMATE in versatility one designer presents the portfolio handbag. Made in an exclusive tapestry it has that special cachet of the double "C" insignia standing for Coblentz, a name long associated with quality. A leather-like trim of brown or black coordinates with the brown, black and natural tones of the tapestry. Neat proportioning makes it small enough for papers and magazines. And zippered compartments inside and out accommodate special papers, pens, keys and cosmetics.

This Christmas smile and say 'cheese'

By GAYNOR MADDOX

This year's Christmas and holiday gifts may take on a different character because of the tight money situation. For example, some persons say they may not even spend money for Christmas and New Year's cards.

Instead, small gifts of luxurious food items are in order now. Supermarket prices are forcing many Americans to bypass some niceties. Therefore, a gift of some slightly unusual or expensive food will be greatly welcomed.

Cheese, in its many attractive forms, makes a different Christmas gift. Bill Dorman, vice president of N. Dorman & Co., one of the largest importers and manufacturers of cheese in the United States, offered helpful advice on buying cheese gifts.

Dorman suggests the giver consider some of the newest or lesser known varieties. "We have just started," he says, "to import from France a delightful soft cream cheese flavored with garlic and herbs. It is packed in attractive five-ounce packages and would certainly make a welcome gift."

Regular Swiss cheese comes in 200-pound wheels. But there is a new variety today from Iceland. It weighs only 20 pounds per wheel.

"That's what we call 'baby Swiss.' It has a delicate taste, slightly sweet and is made of cow's milk. It can be sliced into one or more pound pieces and wrapped in cellophane or foil," Dorman said.

He continues to suggest: "Appenzeler is another cheese—not new but suddenly growing in popularity here—that makes an excellent hors-d'oeuvre item. It is a hard cheese, tangy with nip."

"Denmark," he says, "exports more cheese than any other country in the world. The Danes don't have national cheese but they duplicate the national cheeses of other countries and do a great job. Their Swiss, their Edam, their Muenster are all excellent."

"Wisconsin is doing much the same thing. Their Swiss, Brie and Camembert are all excellent, too. So is their Blue cheese. Cheese making in Wisconsin was started by German and Swiss immigrants who copied what they ate in the Old Country. Now they are copying cheeses from all over the world."

He explains why Americans are not the cheese eaters most Europeans are.

"Americans drink more fluid milk than most people. They don't need cheese for calcium the way others do. But cheese consumption in the United States is increasing rapidly. Also, milk consumption is decreasing," he states.

On the subject of the cholesterol content of cheese, he admits that many cheeses are rather high in cholesterol.

FAMILY LIB By JOANNE and LEW KOCH

Deep-sixing 'Compartment 4'

(Note: Today's column is written by Joanne)

Last night a female anesthetist turned sexologist told an audience of young marrieds that having extra-marital affairs was just fine.

Dr. Lonnie Meyers claimed we all need something called "Compartment 4"—a private space for activities that would not be shared with one's spouse. These activities might be sexual activities or they could be mild events, such as taking in a movie with women friends or going shopping.

Compartment 4 would be a great concept if marriages were like Pullman cars, if human emotions were partitioned so that one relationship did not impinge on the other.

For most married women I know, the sheer logistics of having an affair would be enough to dampen any passion.

I've had difficulties getting away for lunch when the whole family knew I was going. But the strategy necessary to plan a clandestine afternoon or evening with another man would tax a General Von Moltke.

"Where are you going, Mom?"
"Oh, Compartment 4."
"Why are you dressed up? Is Compartment 4 a restaurant?"
"Why isn't Daddy going?"
"When will you shorten my brownie uniform?"
"Why is Daddy sitting in the dark and crying?"
And we are only touching on logistics. What about emotions? Let's assume that Lew would be able to accept a "Compartment 4" with no anger, bitterness, resentment, jealousy (a totally false assumption).

Let's make a second false assumption: that our children, who have the curiosity of Woodward and Bernstein combined, would not be aware of, or confused by, such an arrangement.

Assuming all this, how would I feel, having just returned from a rendezvous in this cozy compartment?

A. Tired, too tired to be interested in an intimate visit with my husband, and in no mood to provide concern, solace, support for children or husband.

B. Guilty, not only because of religious beliefs which do not look kindly upon adultery, but because a bond of trust—one of the few sacred things in a profane world—has been broken.

For some the new morality is a 24-hour feast to which all who are hungry, and even those with a mild yen, are encouraged to come and stuff themselves.

This is O.K., as long as we aren't told that there will be no tummy ache afterward.

I haven't noticed that humans are capable of unlimited intimacy, actions without consequences, emotions that remain neatly in their cubbyholes completely under control.

Let those of us who wish to feast do so. But neither Alka Seltzer commercials, nor the prophets of conspicuous sexual consumption, can convince me that sooner or later we won't have to face the old "one-two."

Home items for Christmas

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Home furnishings prognosticators, see Americans buying more items for the home this Christmas.

The reasoning is that people will spend more time in the home—cutting back on outside entertainment and dining.

However, purchases are expected to be in the smaller accessories, such as clocks, curios, desks, occasional tables, collectors etagères—the $100 and under category. Reproductions will be big gift items, especially those that reflect early Americana because of the Bicentennial influence.

Another reason, home furnishings experts say, people will spend more this Christmas for new draperies, slipcovers and carpeting is "that when people are out of work they tend to do constructive work around the house, such as home wallpapering and painting, making things." This should help Christmas sales of electrical tools this year, too.

Although the home furnishings industry is usually hard hit in a recession many executives point out that this time "it's different. In 1974 a high percentage of families have at least two persons working so if one is out of work it hurts but not like in 1929."

Knock-down (KD) furniture also will be popular. "You can go into a store for last minute shopping and walk right out with a handsome table you assemble at home."

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — I have a large poster with a wood frame that I value very much. This paper poster has canvas on the back but the canvas is pretty well wrecked and getting worse. I would like some suggestions for preserving it. — ERIC.

DEAR ERIC — Take your poster to a picture framer and have it mounted on a new stiff back that will prevent the cracks in the canvas from breaking the poster itself. Any better ideas, anyone? — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is that I am fat and wear half-sizes or women's sizes. Despite having to pay substantially more for my size ($10 more than Misses) the sewing and finishing in my new raincoat is sloppier than in regular size garments. Even the best fashion houses do not seem to care enough about us unfashionable big mammas to treat us fairly. My over-priced raincoat has a rayon satin lining with raw shallow seams not even stitched through in some places. They pulled out during the first wearing. — JO.

DEAR POLLY — I suggest that Sally, the bride who does not know what type cookware to buy, invest in good stainless steel pans with copper bottoms. It lasts forever. I have six pieces that I use every day and find that if one watches the stove temperature things cooked in them do not burn as they do when cooked in many other pans. — MRS. C. P.

DEAR SALLY — Mrs. C. P.'s suggestion is typical of most of the letters we had from other readers. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My original and ecology-minded Pointer is for anyone who grows flowers outdoors. Along the roadside or elsewhere I pick up and save the plastic six-pack holder tops. I fold them lengthwise loosely and staple them together at three points along the edge.

After I have accumulated several I staple them at four matching points — one right, one reverse — which gives them some stretch. When the desired length is reached I staple together or fasten them with baggie ties. They can make decorative covers for flower pots. I made a circle of these as a fence for small plants or a support for weak ones. I also use them for trellises for climbing roses so my pets and my neighbors never bother the plants. — ELMA.

DEAR POLLY — I practically stood on my head to get the water out of the bottom of my chest-type freezer when I would defrost it. After breaking a rib doing this I learned to wrap a clean towel around my mop. Now the wiping up is very easy. — M. H.

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Oswald: "There isn't much to the play of today's hand, but a lot of players would fail to bring home the four-heart contract."

Jim: "South wins the club lead in dummy and should then lead a trump to his ace to keep all options open in case the suit breaks four-nothing."

"Once both opponents follow to the first trump, South can spread his hand and claim his contract although he really should go through the business of playing it out."

Oswald: "He can afford to lose three tricks. A successful diamond finesse will let him get rid of one loser, but if the finesse fails, South is going to run into trouble."

Jim: "The solution is to forget about finesses and develop an end play that will force an opponent to lead spades or give a ruff and discard."

Oswald: "South plays two more rounds of trumps, cashes his king of diamonds, leads a diamond to dummy's ace, ruffs dummy's last diamond, takes the second high club, leads the last club and now can show his hand."

Jim: "It makes no difference who wins that club trick. He has to make a lead that will leave South with just two more losing tricks."

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE C-625: Dick G., aged 20, is a college senior.
"Dr. Crane," he began, "why do girls like to wear high heels?"
"For don't they put more strain on a woman's back and thus make her more likely to trip and fall?"
"Yet most girls I know don't feel properly dressed for social affairs unless they wear high heels. Why?"
Ego Inflation
Once each semester in my large evening classes on our Northwestern University Chicago Campus, I'd let students bring in their friends and relatives.
For I'd then deliver a lecture on "The Psychology of Fashions."
Therein, I'd make drawings on the blackboard of the most seductive type of hat a girl can wear.
And I'd likewise picture the more shapely calf and more slender ankle that high heels offer a woman.

But Dick is correct in saying high heels cause backache.
For a woman's heel may be an inch of two higher than the sole of her foot when she stands on high heels.
Then, to avoid falling forward, she must arch her vertebrae in the small of her back, and if this continues for hours or all day long, most wives deeply appreciate having their husbands massage those aching muscles and ligaments at bedtime.
Oddly enough, women seem to get along better than men on an all-day shopping tour, especially regarding their feet.
So those higher feminine heels might well be imitated by men's footwear!
Furthermore, high heels bolster a woman's ego in several ways.
For example, when men and women are standing barefooted, the women have more of the posture of apes than men do!

For gorillas, gibbons and other apes have shorter legs, in proportion to their arms and torso, than is true of men.
But women also have shorter legs, so the addition of high heels offers them more nearly the vertical proportions of men.
Since women consciously and subconsciously try to imitate the male sex, as notably evidenced in recent years by Women's Lib, when they can smoke and drink and wear jeans and gain the vertical dimensions of a man, they feel elated.
Besides, those extra two inches of height, offer them a loftier outlook on life and further reassure their feminine ego.
All throughout childhood, youngsters keep measuring how tall they are, for height is then linked with that wonderful world of "giants," peopled by parents and other adults.
So a woman's sudden gain of two inches in vertical height, makes her feel more confident and thus happier.
All this is in addition to her more shapely calf and more slender ankles!
Apropos of greater height, a delight of toddlers is to crawl up an open stairway and look down upon the room below.
And to be carried on the shoulders of Daddy or any other adult, for this new vantage point makes them feel akin to the human giants with whom they are normally surrounded.
So any increase in physical height helps make the elves feel more like giants!
And that is a 20-year aspiration of boys and a lifelong desire of girls, who as a rule never fully gain equal height with the human male.
(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of the Dixon Evening Telegraph, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs, when you send for one of his booklets.)

Jet pollution will be studied by NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Do jet planes pollute the upper atmosphere?
To find out, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is equipping four commercial Boeing 747 airliners with sensors to measure pollution along the world's major air lanes.
The five-year program began this week when a United Airlines jumbo jet carried the detectors for the first time. It will take readings during normal commercial flights over the continental United States and between the West Coast and Hawaii.
Within months, jets of three other airlines will operate the sensors: Pan American over its global air corridors; Qantas of Australia in the Southern Hemisphere, and Scandinavian Airline System over the North Polar route.
The $5 million project is called GASP, for Global Air Sampling Program. The goal is to determine how jet emissions and other pollution sources affect the atmosphere at altitudes above 20,000 feet.

gear permits this data to be coordinated with aircraft location, altitude, temperature and speed at the time of measurements.
The ozone layer of the upper atmosphere absorbs the greater part of ultraviolet in the sun. In mild doses this radiation causes sunburn; in larger doses, some fear it could cause skin cancer; if the full force were experienced at the earth's surface, it could be fatal to all life.

When the planes climb to an altitude of 20,000 feet, the air sampling equipment turns on automatically and does not interfere with regular aircraft operations. A tube protruding six inches beneath the first cabin takes in air for analysis by the instruments. Particles are counted and some are collected on an air filter which is changed at the time the plane is serviced.
The system measures dust particles, carbon monoxide, ozone, water vapor, carbon dioxide and oxides of nitrogen. The 747's modern navigational

Frauds costly to Common Market

By DONALD FORBES
Associated Press Writer
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Frauds by small farmers and businessmen alike have cost
the European Common Market hundreds of millions of dollars over the last 15 years, officials here say.

The money — paid out in crooked food deals — has come from the Common Market's Farm Fund, a complicated subsidy system designed to regulate food production and trade in the nine-nation economic community.

No one knows the exact cost,
but officials at Common Market
headquarters in Brussels and parliamentary sources elsewhere in Europe estimate the

"But that is just the tip of the iceberg — the cases we found out about," one Common Market official said.

The fund comes from taxes
paid into the Common Market
by its member states.

The Farm Fund, intended as an agricultural master-plan which would ensure that the community's 280 million population would always have enough to eat at prices fair to both farmers and housewives, is regarded as a soft target for fraud.

Evidence of the big money involved is the fact that agriculture swallowed up two-thirds of the Common Market's $6-billion budget in 1974.

Despite the extent of what is said at headquarters here to be a scandal, the Common Market's fraud control department is tiny and receives little cooperation from Common Market countries.

"A fraud against the community is regarded much more tol-erantly than a swindle uncovered inside one of the member states and infringing its own law," an official said.

Frauds range from petty diddling by farmers working a few acres to massive, carefully planned operations by shadowy syndicates.

Take the case of "The Steers
With The Amputated Ears."
Farmers in Britain get a slaughter subsidy of $44 for each mature steer they take to market.

To prove the subsidy has been paid, an Agriculture Ministry official punches a hole in the animal's ear. Farmers then are able to withdraw the steer from the auction ring, drive it home, back off the holed ear
and sew another on with twine.
The animal's hair is smoothed
over the wound and back it goes to market the next day for a repeat performance.

"The fraud is only discovered at the slaughterhouse and there is no system for tracing which farm the steer came from," a close observer of the British auctions said.

Often, frauds are not even reported to headquarters by the member states. Brussels

frequently finds out about them
from news reports.

The courts are not regarded as much of a deterrent by officials who say most offenders escape only with a fine.

At the other end of the scale are the big operators who usually deal in butter, grain and beef.

In one case last year, a French court ordered four businessmen to pay several million dollars back to customs authorities after they were convicted of cheating on corn shipments to England. Such exports attracted special subsidies before

Britain joined the Common Market in 1973.

The four were accused of claiming the subsidies although the grain never left the Common Market.

Subsidies exist because prices paid to farmers are supposed to be uniform throughout the community. The member countries'
national currencies are not,
however.

The subsidy system was designated to ensure that farmers in one country did not make either a profit or a loss in trade with another because of currency fluctuations.

Though suggested "mail early" dates for Christmas greetings have come and gone, it's still not too late for cards and letters to be delivered by Christmas if mailed promptly. Postmaster Francis Loomis said today.

"Most local residents already have mailed for Christmas," he said. "However, those who haven't should do so as soon as possible. Our goal is to have all mail available up to normal cut-off time on Tuesday, December 24 distributed and delivered that day."

To help speed the mail along its way, Postmaster Loomis urged all to provide an accurate and legible address, including the ZIP Code.

About $250,000 in loot recovered in weekend raid

BARRINGTON HILLS, Ill. (AP) — Stolen goods estimated between $150,000 and $250,000 in value have been recovered by police in a weekend raid at a Barrington Hills estate, authorities said.

One official said the home, owned by Gordon D. Mertens, looked like a department store.

"I expect if you name it, you would have found it in the house," said Barrington Hills Police Chief Ralph Hummel.

He said police, armed with search warrants, found stolen merchandise ranging from guns to paintings, crystal, linens and snow blowers.

Police also found several live hand grenades, more than 500 blasting caps and makings for bombs, the chief said.

The attic, basement and closets of the 14-room house were stocked, according to Hummel, with "everything the homemaker needs."

Police first went to the house Thursday night with a search warrant. Merchandise was still being carted out to a police

Stevenson calls for removal of Brown

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., called for the removal of Gen. George S. Brown as head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and attacked recent United Nations resolutions in support of the Palestinian cause.

Stevenson said Sunday that President Ford should have followed his reprimand of Brown with dismissal after Brown's recent statement about a strong pro-Israeli lobby in the United States and another criticizing the Nuremberg judgments.

The senator made the remarks at a dinner in Chicago where he was honored as 1974 Israel Bond Man of the Year.

Stevenson also said that recent U.N. resolutions on the Palestinian problem "defy both realism and justice."

"We have now seen the saddest spectacle of all: the General Assembly, which once was a council of peace, sounding an ovation for a terrorist."

The senator said despite the threat of war in the Mideast, he said he believes there is hope for Israel's survival and peace in the area. He said he based the hope on "a new breath of realism" in Moscow, Washington, Israel and the Arab states.

Stevenson said he believes that Arab moderates may win out over extremists and that the Palestine Liberation Organization may be subjected to new restraints and moderating

Illinois farmer risks corn in sun drying test

TUSCOLA, Ill. (AP) — Dan Ponder is risking a quarter of his corn crop from last fall so researchers can test the ability of the sun's heat to dry the grain.

A mammoth plastic bag designed to trap the sun's energy has been set up on the ground next to one of Ponder's two, 10,000-bushel grain bins.

The University of Illinois experimenters, headed by Gene Shove, a professor of agricultural engineering, hope heat from the sun will warm the air in the bag so it can be circulated through the bin.

"Solar energy is virtually free and we hope if we can collect it, we can cut down energy costs to the farmer," Shove said.

He said he also hopes the use of solar energy will lessen the farmers' dependence on natural gas and propane. Shortages of these two fuels periodically have placed wet crops in danger of rotting.

When inflated, the bag looks like a giant life raft or a huge water bed, standing four-feet high and 100-feet long.

It is made of three layers of plastic, the outer two are clear and the middle layer is black. The black layer is designed to attract the sun's rays, making the air in the bag on either both sides of the black layer warmer than the outside air.

A small fan at one end of the contraption pushes the heated air to the opposite end, where another fan blows the warm breeze into the bottom of the grain bin.

Ponder said he currently spends about a one-half cent a bushel on natural gas to dry his grain. He said at that rate it would take 40 years to pay for a solar bag, which costs about $2,000.

"They're going to have to find some way to make them more cheaply or it just won't be profitable to buy one," Ponder said.

Shove said Ponder's corn crop contained about 24 per cent moisture when it was put in the bin in mid-October. Eight weeks later, the grain at the bottom has been dried to 14.8 per cent and that to about 15.8 per cent higher up in the bin. Grain elevators penalize farmers for corn which has moisture content above 15.5 per cent, Ponder said.

Shove said the experimenters have learned several things about the solar energy collector. The bag loses efficiency on cloudy days and when snow accumulates on top of the collector, he added.

Shove said solar collectors probably won't be practical for grain drying for several more years.

"The lesson, I think, was that farmers who are thinking about building new bins should consider building them where a barn or another bin won't block the sun from the ground around it. If solar drying is perfected in a few years, they will then be able to take advantage of it," he said.

Autopsy planned in death of Daley political protege

CHICAGO (AP) — An autopsy was to be performed today on the body of Matthew J. Danaher, Circuit Court clerk of Cook County who died Sunday.

Danaher, 47, was an old associate and political protege of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley.

A Cook County coroner's spokesman said results of the autopsy might not be available for a day or two.

Daley said Sunday in a statement, "Mrs. Daley and I are greatly saddened by the death of Matt Danaher. He and his family were friends and neighbors of ours for many years. I want to extend to his family our deepest sympathy."

Danaher, clerk of the Circuit Court of Cook County, was found dead Sunday afternoon of natural causes in his ninth-floor suite in a Chicago hotel. He was scheduled to stand trial shortly in an alleged $400,000 kickback scheme.

Cook County Clerk Stanley T. Kasper Jr. said he was "personally saddened by his passing. I'm really sorry, I liked Matt."

Danaher began his association with the mayor in 1948 as an aide to Daley, who then was state revenue director.

Danaher was one of the rare visitors on a regular basis to the mayor's home and served as Daley's administrative assistant from 1955 to 1963. In 1964, Danaher was elected alderman from the mayor's ward on Chicago's Southwest Side and became the council's president pro tem. He had been clerk of the Circuit Court since September 1968.

Some persons speculated that Danaher might be Daley's successor as mayor.

But Danaher's blossoming political career was stymied when a federal grand jury charged last April that he was involved in a kickback scheme for using his influence to obtain preferential treatment for securing loans, zoning changes and city services.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson, who brought the indictments, called Danaher's death "shocking. There's not much I can say except to offer my sympathy to his family."

Danaher and his brother-in-law, John P. Hyland; and an aide, Walter Z. Gusich; were charged in three indictments. Danaher had pleaded innocent.

The indictments contended that between 1961 and 1968 Danaher and Hyland received about $400,000 in kickbacks. Both men were charged with conspiracy to defraud the government, conspiracy to receive illegal profits and conspiracy to evade income taxes. Hyland also was charged with four counts of perjury before the grand jury and income tax evasion.

Gusich and Danaher were charged with violating tax laws between 1967 and 1969.

In the ensuing months, Danaher had suffered from ulcers and tension, officials said.

"He's been a very sick man," said Chicago Police Sgt. John Cioe said. "He'd been treated for ulcers."

Cioe said that Danaher apparently collapsed in his room Saturday night and had been dead for between 18 and 24 hours. Cioe said the body was discovered by a hotel maid.

Authorities said Danaher was living in the hotel for about six months after his wife, Maureen, 43, filed for a divorce last July. The couple had been married for 24 years.

Free milk plan announced at St. Anne School

St. Anne School today announced a policy for free milk for children unable to pay the full price for milk under the National Special Milk Programs.

Eligibility for participating in the program depends on the size of a family and the family income.

Children from a family of four with an income of not more than $5,640 will be eligible to receive free milk, and those from a family of nine with an income of not more than $9,510 are eligible.

Children from families with incomes higher than the minimum may be eligible for free milk if medical and shelter costs are in excess of 30 per cent of total income or if special education expenses are incurred due to the mental or physical condition of a child. Though suggested "mail early" dates for Christmas greetings have come and gone, it's still not too late for cards and letters to be delivered by Christmas if mailed promptly. Postmaster Francis Loomis said today.

"Most local residents already have mailed for Christmas," he said. "However, those who haven't should do so as soon as possible. Our goal is to have all mail available up to normal cut-off time on Tuesday, December 24 distributed and delivered that day."

To help speed the mail along its way, Postmaster Loomis urged all to provide an accurate and legible address, including the ZIP Code.

OREGON — William Gage, Rt. 3, Dixon was fined $250 on a reduced charge of reckless driving during an appearance in Ogle County Circuit Court. Gage was originally charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated by Forrester Police on Sept. 15. Two other charges of speeding and illegal transportation of liquor were dismissed.

The Telegraph regrets a report in Wednesday's newspaper which inadvertently claimed Gage was fined on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Mt. Morris man is arrested

Robert L. Flockers, 48, Mt. Morris was arrested Saturday by Lee County Sheriff's Deputies on patrol along Lowell Park Road. Flockers was charged with driving while intoxicated. He was brought to the Law Enforcement Center where bond was posted and a court appearance scheduled for Jan. 9, 1975.

Held in theft of purse

OREGON — A Sterling youth was arrested Sunday by Ogle County Sheriff's Police in connection with the theft of a purse from a rural Foreston woman.

Charged with theft and driving while his license was revoked was Gerald L. Warren, 20. Warren was stopped in his car by Sheriff's Police and Foreston Police after Carl Siefken called authorities. Siefken said Warren had stopped at his residence to purchase some gasoline and, after Warren left Siefken noticed his wife's purse was missing.

The purse was found near Warren's car after he was stopped. Warren was being held in Ogle County jail and was scheduled to appear in court today.

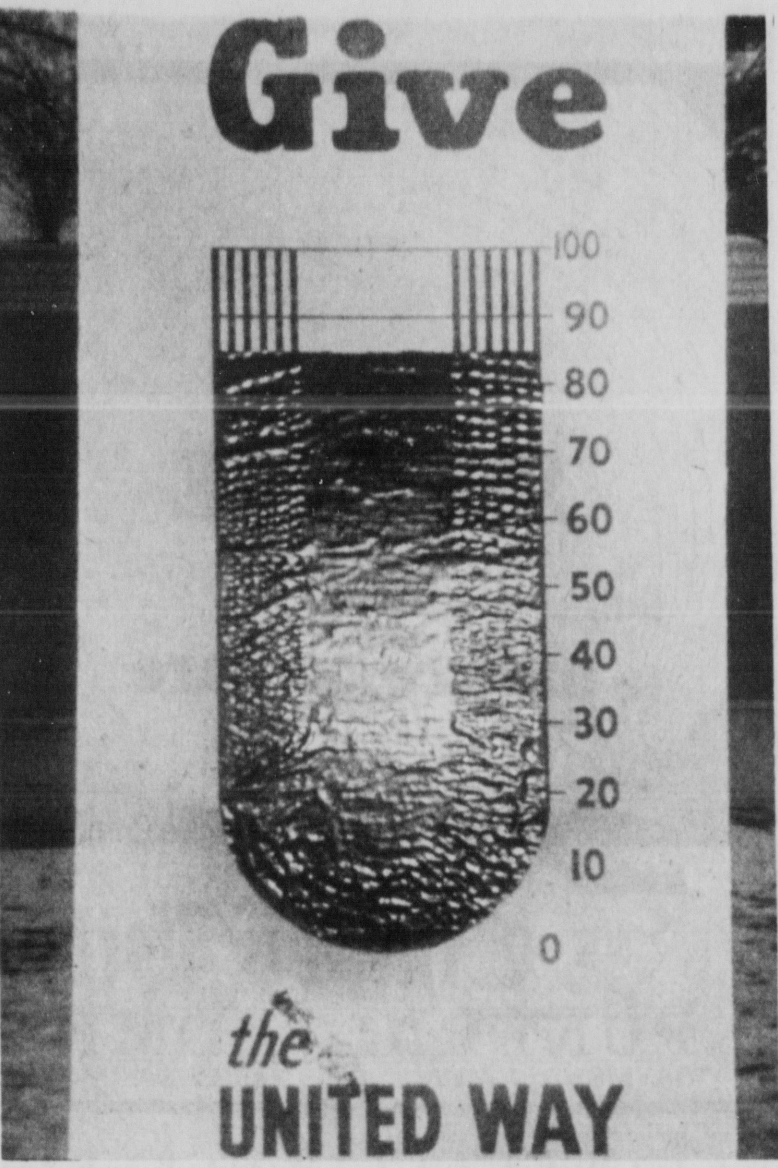

Check charges

OREGON — Shirley F. Kelley, 40, West Chicago was arrested by Ogle County Sheriff's and Byron Police Saturday on a warrant charging deceptive practice. The woman was released on bond at the Public Safety Building and scheduled to appear in court Dec. 20.

About $250,000 in loot recovered in weekend raid

BARRINGTON HILLS, Ill. (AP) — Stolen goods estimated between $150,000 and $250,000 in value have been recovered by police in a weekend raid at a Barrington Hills estate, authorities said.

One official said the home, owned by Gordon D. Mertens, looked like a department store.

"I expect if you name it, you would have found it in the house," said Barrington Hills Police Chief Ralph Hummel.

He said police, armed with search warrants, found stolen merchandise ranging from guns to paintings, crystal, linens and snow blowers.

Police also found several live hand grenades, more than 500 blasting caps and makings for bombs, the chief said.

The attic, basement and closets of the 14-room house were stocked, according to Hummel, with "everything the homemaker needs."

Police first went to the house Thursday night with a search warrant. Merchandise was still being carted out to a police

Stevenson calls for removal of Brown

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., called for the removal of Gen. George S. Brown as head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and attacked recent United Nations resolutions in support of the Palestinian cause.

Stevenson said Sunday that President Ford should have followed his reprimand of Brown with dismissal after Brown's recent statement about a strong pro-Israeli lobby in the United States and another criticizing the Nuremberg judgments.

The senator made the remarks at a dinner in Chicago where he was honored as 1974 Israel Bond Man of the Year.

Stevenson also said that recent U.N. resolutions on the Palestinian problem "defy both realism and justice."

"We have now seen the saddest spectacle of all: the General Assembly, which once was a council of peace, sounding an ovation for a terrorist."

The senator said despite the threat of war in the Mideast, he said he believes there is hope for Israel's survival and peace in the area. He said he based the hope on "a new breath of realism" in Moscow, Washington, Israel and the Arab states.

Stevenson said he believes that Arab moderates may win out over extremists and that the Palestine Liberation Organization may be subjected to new restraints and moderating

Illinois farmer risks corn in sun drying test

TUSCOLA, Ill. (AP) — Dan Ponder is risking a quarter of his corn crop from last fall so researchers can test the ability of the sun's heat to dry the grain.

A mammoth plastic bag designed to trap the sun's energy has been set up on the ground next to one of Ponder's two, 10,000-bushel grain bins.

The University of Illinois experimenters, headed by Gene Shove, a professor of agricultural engineering, hope heat from the sun will warm the air in the bag so it can be circulated through the bin.

"Solar energy is virtually free and we hope if we can collect it, we can cut down energy costs to the farmer," Shove said.

He said he also hopes the use of solar energy will lessen the farmers' dependence on natural gas and propane. Shortages of these two fuels periodically have placed wet crops in danger of rotting.

When inflated, the bag looks like a giant life raft or a huge water bed, standing four-feet high and 100-feet long.

It is made of three layers of plastic, the outer two are clear and the middle layer is black. The black layer is designed to attract the sun's rays, making the air in the bag on either both sides of the black layer warmer than the outside air.

A small fan at one end of the contraption pushes the heated air to the opposite end, where another fan blows the warm breeze into the bottom of the grain bin.

Ponder said he currently spends about a one-half cent a bushel on natural gas to dry his grain. He said at that rate it would take 40 years to pay for a solar bag, which costs about $2,000.

"They're going to have to find some way to make them more cheaply or it just won't be profitable to buy one," Ponder said.

Shove said Ponder's corn crop contained about 24 per cent moisture when it was put in the bin in mid-October. Eight weeks later, the grain at the bottom has been dried to 14.8 per cent and that to about 15.8 per cent higher up in the bin. Grain elevators penalize farmers for corn which has moisture content above 15.5 per cent, Ponder said.

Shove said the experimenters have learned several things about the solar energy collector. The bag loses efficiency on cloudy days and when snow accumulates on top of the collector, he added.

Shove said solar collectors probably won't be practical for grain drying for several more years.

"The lesson, I think, was that farmers who are thinking about building new bins should consider building them where a barn or another bin won't block the sun from the ground around it. If solar drying is perfected in a few years, they will then be able to take advantage of it," he said.

Autopsy planned in death of Daley political protege

CHICAGO (AP) — An autopsy was to be performed today on the body of Matthew J. Danaher, Circuit Court clerk of Cook County who died Sunday.

Danaher, 47, was an old associate and political protege of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley.

A Cook County coroner's spokesman said results of the autopsy might not be available for a day or two.

Daley said Sunday in a statement, "Mrs. Daley and I are greatly saddened by the death of Matt Danaher. He and his family were friends and neighbors of ours for many years. I want to extend to his family our deepest sympathy."

Danaher, clerk of the Circuit Court of Cook County, was found dead Sunday afternoon of natural causes in his ninth-floor suite in a Chicago hotel. He was scheduled to stand trial shortly in an alleged $400,000 kickback scheme.

Cook County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper Jr. said he was "personally saddened by his passing. I'm really sorry, I liked Matt."

Danaher began his association with the mayor in 1948 as an aide to Daley, who then was state revenue director.

Danaher was one of the rare visitors on a regular basis to the mayor's home and served as Daley's administrative assistant from 1955 to 1963. In 1964, Danaher was elected alderman from the mayor's ward on Chicago's Southwest Side and became the council's president pro tem. He had been clerk of the Circuit Court since September 1968.

Some persons speculated that Danaher might be Daley's successor as mayor.

But Danaher's blossoming political career was stymied when a federal grand jury charged

last April that he was involved in a kickback scheme for using his influence to obtain preferential treatment for securing loans, zoning changes and city services.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson, who brought the indictments, called Danaher's death "shocking. There's not much I can say except to offer my sympathy to his family."

Danaher and his brother-in-law, John P. Hyland; and an aide, Walter Z. Gusich; were charged in three indictments. Danaher had pleaded innocent.

The indictments contended that between 1961 and 1968 Danaher and Hyland received about $400,000 in kickbacks. Both men were charged with conspiracy to defraud the government, conspiracy to receive illegal profits and conspiracy to evade income taxes. Hyland also was charged with four counts of perjury before the grand jury and income tax evasion.

Gusich and Danaher were charged with violating tax laws between 1967 and 1969.

In the ensuing months, Danaher had suffered from ulcers and tension, officials said.

"He's been a very sick man," said Chicago Police Sgt. John Cioe said. "He'd been treated for ulcers."

Cioe said that Danaher apparently collapsed in his room Saturday night and had been dead for between 18 and 24 hours. Cioe said the body was discovered by a hotel maid.

Authorities said Danaher was living in the hotel for about six months after his wife, Maureen, 43, filed for a divorce last July. The couple had been married for 24 years.

A Christmas story

Santa's problem pup

CHAPTER 6
By Bob Boyle

When they got to the kennel she let Peako off the leash. He went to the big window in front of the kennel and looked toward Santa's house.

"That won't do you any good," Miss Kay Nihn said as she put a chain across the door. Peako continued to look out the big window. It was made up of many small panes of glass that criss-crossed each other. Miss Kay Nihn finished chaining the door and said, "Well, you missed your supper so you'll have to go hungry until tomorrow. Now good night and stay put."

As she left she turned off the light. Peako started to cry. "Be quiet," Miss Kay Nihn shouted.

After she was gone for a few minutes Peako went to the door and tried to push the chain back with his nose.

He couldn't budge it. He stood on his two hind legs and tried to move the chain with his front paws.

It still wouldn't budge. He then tried to grab it with his mouth but it was too tight. The chain wouldn't move. Peako couldn't get out the door.

He walked to the back of the kennel but found no way out there. He went to the front window again.

He put his nose against one of the small panes. He pushed and pushed and pushed.

Pop went the pane of glass as it fell against the snow.

Peako scrunched himself up, put his head through the opening and then squeezed his tiny body through it.

Halfway through he got stuck. He started to whimper. But he couldn't move.

His cries alerted the other little puppies in the kennel.

They saw that Peako was stuck. Two of the little poodles got behind him and with their noses they started to push.

They pushed and pushed and pushed and pushed and, suddenly, Peako slid through the opening.

He turned to them and wagged his tail as if to say "thank you."

He then turned and ran lick-ity-split toward Santa's house.

He went to the front door and breathed on the knob to make it warm. He grabbed it in his mouth and again did a somersault, and click, the door opened.

He closed it by pushing his nose against it and ran to the dining room.

But Santa and all the elves had gone.

Peako started to whimper. "Hey, what's that?" Juniperperper said, as he rubbed the sleep from his eyes.

"I hear something, too," Jinkersnipes said as he awoke. "It sounds like a dog."

"You don't think it's him, do you?" Juniperperper asked. "No, I don't think it could be Peako," Jinkersnipes said.

"Miss Kay Nihn said she put a chain on the kennel door. Just then, Peako leaped up onto Juniperperper's bed and started to lick his face. He jumped down and then jumped to Jinkersnipes' bed and licked his face.

The two elves started to laugh. "It's Peako, it is Peako," they shouted. The other elves began to awaken.

"Hey, Peako is here," they said. "Good old Peako got out and is here."

The dog ran from elf to elf, licking their hands and faces. "Hurray for Peako," Jasper said. "He showed old Miss Kay Nihn."

Mrs. Claus was sleeping soundly but the commotion

Halfway through he got stuck.

awakened her, too. Putting on her robe, she went into the elves' room.

Peako ran toward her and started to wag his whole body. "Peako, Peako," she said. "What are you doing here?"

Miss Kay Nihn will be furious. After licking Mrs. Claus' hand, Peako ran into Santa's bedroom.

Santa was sleeping soundly in his red pajamas, with a huge nightcap on his head.

Peako jumped up and started to lick Santa's face.

"What's this, what's this?" Santa said. "What's going on? Who is licking my face?"

Mrs. Claus came in and turned on the light. "Look who is here," Mrs. Claus said.

"It couldn't be, but it is," Santa said. "It's Peako. My, my, how did you get away from Miss Kay Nihn?"

The elves crowded around the door. "Let him stay, Santa, let him stay," they shouted. "Please let him stay."

"Well, it is late," Santa laughed. "And I wouldn't want to wake Miss Kay Nihn at this hour, so I guess it will be all right for Peako to stay here tonight at the foot of my bed."

"Now boys, back to bed," Mrs. Claus said. "We must get settled."

When the elves had gone, Peako went to the foot of Santa's bed and fell soundly asleep. "He is some dog," Santa said, as he closed his eyes.

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Dec. 16, the 350th day of 1974. There are 15 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1773, American colonists disguised as Indians boarded a British ship in Boston harbor and dumped 342 chests of tea overboard. The tax protest went down in history as the Boston Tea Party. On this date:

In 1770, the German composer, Ludwig von Beethoven, was born.

In 1809, Napoleon Bonaparte was divorced from Josephine by an act of the French parliament.

In 1835, a fire in New York City burned some 600 buildings.

In 1916, the monk who wielded powerful influence over the Russian Czar, Gregory Rasputin, was murdered.

In 1944, the World War II Battle of the Bulge was being fought in Belgium.

In 1960, two airliners crashed after colliding over New York Harbor, killing 131 persons.

WOULD THERE BE BLOOD IF YOU NEEDED A TRANSFUSION?

THE NEED FOR BLOOD NEVER TAKES A VACATION SUMMER IS ONE OF THE BUSIEST SEASONS

THE PROBLEM:

Blood is needed to treat accident victims, hemophiliacs, and leukemics; for open heart surgery, organ transplants, sickle cell anemia, hemorrhage, burns, and shock. The need for blood is constant and continuous, and must be met 24 hours a day every day of the year.

There is no substitute for human blood; it must be given by people for people. Because it is living human tissue, it must be transfused within 21 days. To have enough blood available to take care of every patient who may need it requires two things; 1) enough donors to provide the blood, and 2) a mechanism to collect, process, distribute, and transfuse it where it's needed, when it's needed.

WHAT YOU CAN DO:

1. If you have given blood in the past, but not in the past 8 weeks, or if you have never given blood and are between the ages of 18 and 66, weigh 110 pounds or more, and enjoy general good health, contact the American Red Cross office for an appointment during the next blood mobile drive.
2. If you are now a regular volunteer blood donor, please continue to give blood. The success of the Red Cross Blood Program depends upon your continued participation.
3. If your community organization, business, church, political, union, or student group would be willing to help us, call Nadine Stein at the American Red Cross — 284-2829.
4. If you know you cannot be a blood donor, please show this advertisement to at least one other person you think is eligible, and ask him to help.

when you give blood

you give life.

THE IMPORTANCE OF GIVING BLOOD:

If enough people volunteer to give blood when needed, there will be no blood shortages. Existing blood programs have succeeded in providing 90 percent of the blood used in the past 10 months. Working together, we believe we can establish a 100 percent volunteer blood supply on a continuing basis. If we can, everyone in the community — regardless of age, economic status, or previous medical history — will, in effect, have "blood assurance."

There is evidence to support the contention that the blood supply will be purer, healthier, and the incidence of disease following transfusion markedly less. And those with serious blood disorders such as hemophilia and leukemia will no longer face alone the prospect of recruiting blood donors in order to meet their needs for blood components. Through this program, any resident in Lee County can receive blood without obligation.

Giving blood is the most fundamental act of human caring. Despite all of the so-called divisions in our society — between races, classes, ethnic groups, and generations — there remains this eloquent expression of common humanity: the gift of blood, the gift of life itself. So it's up to you.

TOM CECCHETTI is in control of his Rockford East opponent Iley Bailey-Murry in the 132-pound wrestling match at East on Saturday. Despite Cecchetti's 6-4 triumph over Bailey-Murry, the Dukes dropped a 29-22 decision to East. (Telegraph Photo)

Duke wrestlers split two matches

By TIMOTHY LYON
Telegraph Sports Writer
ROCKFORD — Displaying some very good wrestling, but giving away too many points, the Dixon wrestlers split the pair of matches held here Saturday. The Dukes defeated Guilford 30-17 and lost 29-22 to Rockford East.

Dixon had little trouble with Guilford, but had some difficulty with Rockford East. It is possible that Dixon could have defeated East if they hadn't given up so many points. Dixon coach Ron Semetis expressed that view after the match. "We wrestled well generally, but gave away too many easy points," commented Semetis. "Having to forfeit 105 to East really hurt us and James shouldn't have been pinned. Jones could have wrestled better also."

In the East match, Mike Allen and Bob Pinegar made a very big comeback for Dixon by turning in pins. Allen, 167, pinned East's Randy Wescon at 5:53 after scoring four points with a takedown and reversal, while holding Wescon scoreless.

Pinegar came up against Lonnie Washington, 185 pounder for East, and stuck him at 5:14. Pinegar outscored his opponent 10-1 before the fall. He scored with three takedowns, an escape, and a near fall, and Washington escaped once.

At 98 for Dixon, John Green tied Ed Foreman 5-5. Green had two takedowns and an escape and Foreman executed three escapes and a takedown.

The Dukes had to forfeit the 105 position.

Ray Wilson wrestled an excellent match for the Dukes at 112. He defeated East's Dave Graham 4-3. Wilson gained a reversal, an escape and a penalty point. Graham had a takedown and an escape.

The Dukes had two falls against Guilford, by Fritts and McDonald. Fritts stuck Mark Dundou at 5:58. He came back from a 5-2 deficit.

McDonald pinned Mark Domino three minutes into the match, after taking him down in the first period.

Green won 10-1 over Guilford's Larry Nalewanski. He had a takedown, reversal, and two near falls and his opponent had single penalty point.

Cullen wrestled at 105 against Guilford. He was downed by Mike Spear, 3-2. Guilford forfeited the 112 weight class.

Magnafici came back with a 3-1 victory over Dan Hunter. He had a takedown and escape, while Hunter could only manage an escape.

Cecchetti got his second win by defeating Kevin Meyer 5-0. Cecchetti executed a takedown and an escape.

Lybarger defeated Guilford's Jeff Anderson, 4-1, with a takedown and reversal. Anderson received a point for Lybarger's stalling.

James came back with a 14-2 victory over Darrel Ford. Ford gained a reversal while James controlled him with three takedowns two escapes, and two near falls.

Allen lost his second match, 6-4, to Perry Tuneberg.

A 4-4 tie was all Pinegar could get in his match with Bill Travnik. Pinegar fained two escapes and a takedown, while his opponent had a takedown, escape and penalty point.

Guilford's Mark Boettman slipped by Jones 1-0.

The Dukes are now 4-2 in dual meets. Thursday night, Dec. 19, Dixon will host Freeport.

Redskins humble the Bears 42-0

Cardinals rally for victory

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
It took less than 30 minutes for the St. Louis Cardinals to wake up—and not the 30 minutes in which they'd gotten shoved around. "Nobody said much at half-time," said Terry Metcalf, revealing the silence in the Cards' dressing room, when they trailed the New York Giants 14-0. "Without saying anything, we all knew we had to do a better job. We'd given up too much and weren't about to give up more."

What St. Louis—mainly Metcalf and Jim Hart—gave in the second half was a typically brilliant comeback performance that resulted in a 26-14 victory.

And that gave the Cardinals their first National Football League divisional title in 26 years, and St. Louis' first ever. When the Cards won the NFL's Western Division title in 1948, they called Chicago their home.

Washington's Redskins, who had charged into a tie with the Cards atop the National Conference East, clobbered Chicago 42-0 and finished tied with St. Louis, each with 10-4 records.

But the Cards got the title by virtue of their two regular-season victories over Washington. The Redskins had to settle for the NFL's wild-card playoff berth.

In Sunday's other games, it was Miami 34, New England 27; Los Angeles 19, Buffalo 14; Houston 28, Cleveland 24; the New York Jets 45, Baltimore 38; San Francisco 35, New Orleans 21; San Diego 17, Denver 0; Philadelphia 28, Detroit 17, and Atlanta 10, Green Bay 3.

On Saturday it was Pittsburgh 27, Cincinnati 3; Minnesota 35, Kansas City 15, and Oakland 27, Dallas 23.

St. Louis will visit the Minnesota Vikings, champions of the NFC Central Division, next Saturday in a first-round playoff game. On Sunday, the Redskins will face the NFC West's winners, the Rams, in Los Angeles.

In the AFC next Saturday, the Dolphins, first in the East, are in Oakland to play the Raiders, the best of the West. On Sunday, Pittsburgh, the AFC Central Division champ, hosts Buffalo, the conference's wild-card team.

Redskins 42, Bears 0
Veteran Sonny Jurgensen, who started in place of No. 1 quarterback Billy Kneib, connected on 14 of 22 passes for 205 first-half yards, hitting Charley Taylor for an 11-yard touchdown pass and setting up touchdowns runs of one and four yards by Larry Brown to give Washington a 21-0 halftime lead.

In the second half, quarterback Joe Theismann took over and threw a 13-yard third-quarter touchdown pass to Taylor. Duane Thomas and Charley Evans ran for the final Washington touchdowns in the last period.

Dolphins 34, Patriots 27
New England's Mack Herron set an NFL record for most single-season total yards in the Patriots' loss to Miami. Herron gained 185 yards on rushes, receptions and kick returns to finish with 2,444 for the year, four more than Gale Sayers got with the 1966 Chicago Bears.

But the Pats couldn't handle the aerial tandem of veteran quarterback Earl Morrall and rookie wide receiver Melvin Baker, who teamed on touchdowns covering 37 and 46 yards. Don Nottingham also bulled in for two Miami scores as the Dolphins wiped out New England's early 24-0 lead.

Jets 45, Colts 38
"I don't know whether or not this is my last game," Joe Namath said after completing 19 of 28 passes for 281 yards and two touchdowns in New York's victory over Baltimore.

49ers 35, Saints 21
Gene Washington caught a 17-yard touchdown pass from rookie Tom Owen on the first play of the fourth quarter and, just 23 seconds later, defensive tackle Bill Belk recovered a fumble by New Orleans quarterback Larry Cipa and scored another touchdown, putting San Francisco ahead 28-7.

Chargers 17, Broncos 0
Otis Armstrong of Denver, with a 142-yard day, won the NFL rushing title with 1,407 yards. But San Diego rookie Don Woods surpasses John Brockington's first-year rushing mark of 1,105 yards by gaining 105 to finish with 1,162. And he got San Diego's first touchdown on a six-yard run in the first quarter.

Falcons 10, Packers 3
Dave Hampton's five-yard run in the opening period for Atlanta accounted for the game's only touchdown.

Hunter becomes free agent

NEW YORK (AP) — Catfish Hunter, the American League's top pitcher and the ace of the three-time world champion Oakland A's, was declared a free agent today in a historic baseball arbitration ruling.

Hunter, the 28-year-old right-hander who has won 106 games over the past five years, may now offer his services to the highest bidder, and there were strong indications he was in no mood to listen to A's owner Charles O. Finley, who lost the arbitration ruling.

American League President Lee MacPhail was described as "quite shocked" by the three-man board's ruling, which in effect upheld Hunter's claim that Finley had not honored all the terms of Hunter's two-year, $200,000 contract.

The contract called for $50,000 in regular salary each season, and $50,000 more to be paid in whatever manner Hunter designated, a baseball official said today. Hunter asked that the $50,000 be given in deferred payments to an insurance company so that he could avoid high taxes on it, and Finley objected to that method, the official said.

The official, who declined to be named, said, "Mr. Finley had offered to pay the money. We expected that the arbitrator might say he had to pay it, even perhaps pay interest, but we never expected Hunter to be declared a free agent."

Hunter had announced on the eve of the World Series that Finley had not paid the $50,000 owed him and that he would seek to become a free agent.

"He never gave it to me or to the insurance company," said Hunter of Finley, who has been threatening to break up some of the team which has marched to three straight World Series titles, a feat matched only by two previous New York Yankee teams.

With today's Hunter decision, a breakup of the A's already has begun since.

Amboy nips SoBos

AMBOY—The Amboy Clippers shot 58 per cent from the field in the second half and were a perfect eight-of-eight at the charity stripe to beat the South Beloit SoBos 55-49, here, Saturday night in a Shark Conference basketball game.

"We finally got going in the second half," Gary Croegaert, Amboy head varsity coach, commented. "We were lethargic in the first half, after our road game (at Marengo) on Friday. We played excellent man-to-man defense the last half and shut off their inside game."

"Buck Fenwick had 14 points in the second half and Steve Powers and Joe Bothe both finished with nine rebounds and 12 points for our outstanding players." Fenwick paced the Clippers with 16 points.

Amboy finished with 21 baskets in 45 attempts for 47 per cent. South Beloit was 21-for-53 for 40 per cent. The Clippers also owned a 32-27 advantage on the boards. The victory improves Amboy's Shark slate to 2-1 and the season record to 4-3.

After a night off Friday, the Clippers host Franklin Center in a non-conference contest on Saturday.

Eagles rally for Upstate Illini win

FRANKLIN GROVE—It's the greatest comeback victory we've ever had," is the way Franklin Center varsity coach Dennis Kessel responded to the Eagles' 65-64 conference win over the Pearl City Wolves, here, Saturday night.

John Kirchhofer put in a basket to give the Eagles a 64-62 lead with 1:08 left in the game. Pearl City then missed a field goal attempt, with Franklin Center pulling down the rebound. Kirchhofer was fouled and made one shot with :08 showing.

A Pearl City basket before the buzzer was meaningless as the Eagles stretched their unbeaten streak to 5-0, with three of the victories in the Upstate Illini. "We were sluggish the first half," Kessel admitted, "and we didn't execute well at all. We shot only 24 per cent, with 12 baskets in 49 attempts."

"The kids were definitely tired and we were getting beat on our press. Pearl City got numerous fast-break layups and (Jim) Jeffery had 12 points. We were just emotionally drained after our game Friday night with Ashton."

"We were down nine points starting the second half and we came out and put in five straight baskets in less than 1:30. It was a tremendous effort on the part of the kids, who made up their minds at half they wouldn't be quitters."

Kirchhofer tallied 19 points and latched onto 18 rebounds for the Eagles. Jeff Jahn led in points with 20, while Scott Delhotal added 13. More selective shooting enabled Franklin Center to can 13 of 29 attempts in the second half. The Eagles now go to Dundas on Friday and Amboy on Saturday.

Jeff Farwell led Pearl City with 16 points, one more than both Jeffery and Robin Brinkmeier had.

ASHTON—Ray O'Dell dumped in 23 points while Norb Dunkel hauled down 14 rebounds as the Ashton Aces defeated Leaf River 56-45, here, Saturday night in an Upstate Illini Conference basketball game.

The win ups Ashton's conference record to 2-1 and 3-2 overall, with the Aces next hosting Orangeville on Friday. O'Dell led an Ashton rally, which wiped out a Leaf River 25-19 advantage at half, with 13 points in the final 16 minutes. Mike Caldwell contributed all 11 of his markers in the second half.

Ashton was 22-of-66 from the field for 33 per cent, while Leaf River was 17-of-48 for 35 per cent. The Aces owned a 36-27 advantage on the boards. Glenn Hart tacked on 11 points to the winners' total. Brad Miller had

Missed free throws, poor shooting hamper Dukes in overtime loss

By MIKE CUNIFF
Telegraph Sports Editor

Winter will not make its official presence for another week yet but the fans in attendance at the Dixon-DeLaSalle varsity basketball game at Lancaster Gymnasium Saturday night had better hope the switch in seasons does not bring as cold a temperature as the shooting display by both teams.

DeLaSalle was 17-for-53 for 32 per cent during the non-conference contest, won by the Meteors 53-51 in overtime. The Dukes had trouble finding the hoop all evening, also, as evidenced by their 18-for-60 performance for a mediocre 30 per cent.

Dick Franklin, Dixon head varsity coach, just shook his head in the locker room after the game and stated, "I didn't think we took that bad of shots. We just couldn't hit. And in that case, you just have to keep shooting and hope something will fall in."

But as poor as the field goal accuracy was, Dixon missed 18 free throws out of 33 attempts, including seven charity tosses during the last 4:13 of regulation time. DeLaSalle also had a chance to put the game away in the fourth quarter, but missed five of six free throws (a pair of bonus situations) in the final 2:16.

Dixon guard Dave Zinnen gave the Dukes a 48-47 advantage with 1:47 left in regulation time, but the Meteors knotted it at 48 as Paul Sidney hit the second chance of a two-shot foul with 1:06 to go. Neither team scored again before the buzzer sounded.

Zinnen canned a jumper from 10 feet to enable Dixon to take a 50-48 lead with 2:19 remaining in the extra session. An offensive foul on the visitors' Sidney gave Steve Breitza a chance to make the lead four with a bonus free throw situation, but the senior center failed to convert his first shot. Sidney then blocked Dave Moody's field goal attempt.

A Dixon foul sent Bill Cannon to the charity stripe for a one-and-one. Cannon missed but Sidney popped home the rebound, to tie the game 50-50 with 1:48 to go. A technical foul against the visitors sent Moody to the line with 1:16 remaining. Moody swished the free toss, but then took a low percentage shot and missed when the Dukes were awarded the ball out-of-bounds.

Sidney canned a 15-footer, with :51 left, to give his team a 52-51 advantage. Dixon turned the ball over on a carrying violation but forced a jump ball and regained possession. Moody missed again and Jim O'Brien plucked off the rebound for the Meteors.

A jumper by Sidney failed to drop but Cannon was fouled after clearing the offensive board. Cannon made one of two free throws to make the final margin of two points. The Dukes called time out with six ticks left on the clock.

Ned Vail's attempt to tie was off when time resumed and Breitza's basket was voided by the officials, who ruled time had expired before the shot was taken. The loss dropped the Dixon season record to 1-6, and was particularly frustrating since the Purple-and-White rallied from a 47-41 deficit, six minutes to go in regulation time, to knot the game at 47-47.

The Dukes had five brief leads in the game, four in the opening quarter, with the largest margin 4-0 after Vail swished an offensive rebound and a 15-footer in the first two minutes. However, the Meteors surged back to gain a 15-12 advantage before the stanza expired, with three offensive rebound buckets being the difference.

O'Brien had one of the offensive boards converted into two points while Ken Minor jammed through a rebound of his own missed shot. Then, with :26 to go, O'Brien hit the first of a two-shot charity chance. The second attempt missed and Sidney's tip-in from the left was no good. Ron Hacker followed from the other side, however, and put home the basket.

DeLaSalle added one point to its margin in the second quarter, despite hitting only three baskets. The Meteors tacked on a half-dozen free throws, including a four-for-four performance by Hacker. The Dukes netted only a trio of 15 field goal tries in the eight minutes and were 5-11 at the charity line.

The visitors played a deliberate game throughout the first half and the slow pace was not counteracted by the Dukes. "We wanted to run," Franklin said, "but we just didn't seem to have any life. Nobody seemed to want to go to the basket."

Moody dropped home two baskets and four free throws in the third quarter to collect eight of the 14 Dixon markers. DeLaSalle expanded its lead to 47-41 with 6:08 to go, but baskets by Moody, Breitza on an offensive rebound, and Breitza again on a turn-around jump shot, tied it at 47 apiece with 3:10 remaining.

Both teams placed two players in double figures. Moody had 13 and Breitza a dozen for Dixon while the visitors were paced by Sidney with 14, Hacker with 11. Breitza pumped in six of 11 field goal tries, while Zinnen was four-of-eight. Vail and Moody had three baskets each out of 17 and 15 shots, respectively. Sidney's six buckets came from 19 attempts for the winners.

The Dukes have only one game this week, an NCIC affair at Mendota on Friday.

The Dixon Dukelets blew a 14-point lead in the fourth quarter down to three, but then regrouped for a 54-49 win.

Jeff Renne led a balanced scoring attack with 14 points, followed by Tom Evett with 12. Erick Lohse and John Kemp were close behind with 10 points each.

Evett led in rebounds with 10 and Lohse pulled down seven.

The sophs won their game at the free-throw line, where they hit 14 out of 18 for 78 per cent.

The Dukelets are now 5-1 for the season, while DeLaSalle dropped to a 4-2 record.

The Doctor Says:

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — In my opinion, a discussion on chronic brucellosis in your column would be very useful. Believe it or not, I find people who never heard of the disease. Some that know this infection exists have little knowledge otherwise and, in fact, think the sources of the illness no longer exist.

Brucellosis controls are indicated and have lessened the extent of the disease, but I understand it is a health menace over the world. With proper knowledge, many people could avoid the disease.

DEAR READER — Fortunately it is not as common as it once was. Equally fortunate, the medical profession has medicine that will cure it when it does occur. You are right, however, it still is a health problem. Most cases of brucellosis occur from drinking raw milk. The germs in the milk enter the body through the digestive tract and infect the person. About five per cent of the cattle in the United States are infected with brucellosis.

The disease in man is characterized by recurrent fever. These can be severe spiking fevers with intermittent chills. The lymph glands are swollen and there is associated headache and joint aches. The diagnosis is often suspected because of the nature of the fever and the absence of other causes for the fever. The diagnosis is established by finding the germs.

The infection may cause almost no symptoms or severe sudden symptoms. It can also be chronic, causing persistent low-grade fever. The germs can be eliminated by antimicrobial treatment. In chronic cases, two or three courses of treatment may be necessary.

The disease is also called Malta fever because it was first described in British soldiers dying on the island of Malta from this infection. They got it from goat's milk. A Dr. Bruce described the disease, hence, the name brucellosis. It is also called Bang's disease, particularly among dairy men, after the name of the man who first discovered it in cattle. Others know the disease as undulant fever, describing the undulating nature of the body temperature of the patient.

A small number of infections are caused by the germs getting into a break in the skin from infected carcasses, usually in slaughterhouse workers.

In infected raw milk, the organism can live under refrigerated conditions about 10 days, and in cheese as long as three months. When a person gets infected, the disease may become apparent within days or months after the germs enter the body. Pasteurization of milk kills the germs.

It is important to realize that milk is excellent food, not only for us but for germs, too. Many diseases used to cause epidemics as milkborne diseases. Pasteurization and strict standards have eliminated the massive problem. There are still isolated areas in the United States, however, where uncontrolled raw milk is available. This is even more true on a world-wide basis. The traveler in foreign lands is wise to avoid milk unless it is pasteurized. Also, you should avoid drinking fresh milk from your friendly farmer neighbor. He just might have an infected cow and not know it. The way to prevent most cases of brucellosis is to avoid raw milk that might be from an infected cow or goat.

She'd like to forget her trombone talents

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Stephanie Edwards, who occasionally appeared in the "Girl With Something Extra" series, is a girl with something extra. But she'd rather not discuss it. It's the trombone she used to play.

The fact is mentioned in a handout for ABC's new "AM America" morning show she'll be cohosting next year. And she is weary, in a good-natured way, of being kidded about the slipshorn.

"Charles, get rid of the trombone," she begged the press attaché accompanying your observer. Your observer, a fine flugelhornist, had the brass to ask about her horn. He quickly dropped the matter.

Miss Edwards, a tall, friendly young Minnesotan, comes to Fun City by way of Los Angeles, where for 3½ years she's cohosted a morning talk show with KABC-TV personality Ralph Story.

She says she got into show biz the traditional way — college drama study, a march on Hollywood and door-pounding for acting jobs between such civilian work as secretary to a minister and instructor in a modeling school.

She credits Story, who'll be the "AM America" Western correspondent, with greatly helping her career. She said she saw him on the tube one day and simply wrote him for advice on how to get started in show biz.

"He called me in for an interview and hired me as a researcher," she said. "I later became his secretary and after a year of that, he had the opportunity to start the KABC show and said, 'I know you'd rather be on camera than behind it' and gave me a try."

Miss Edwards, who strikes one as a very common-sense, straightforward person, says she's found this town "not as bad as I expected, considering it's a place I never said I'd go...."

Ed and Carl put together a plastic cylinder that's going to help keep your rates down.

It's called a vacuum chamber weld tester. It's not too fancy, and it doesn't have any microcircuits or chrome trim, but it could save us more than $100,000 a year.

Ed Steeve, Commonwealth Edison engineer, designed it; Carl Knutson, Assistant Shop Superintendent, helped put it together at our Maywood Technical Center.

The vacuum chamber consists of a short, transparent plastic cylinder that's slightly larger in circumference than the pipe it's testing. We fasten it around the weld, where the leaks are likely to occur, then seal it airtight. The space between pipe and cylinder is then partially filled with a clear liquid (usually water) and a vacuum pump is attached to remove the air. If there are any leaks in the weld, the air from inside the pipe will create a column of telltale bubbles.

It's a simple process, but vitally important. When we put cables in underground pipes, we expect them to last for many years. A pin-hole leak would result in a cable failure, a loss of power, and a loss of valuable man-hours in repair work.

We have been testing welds by other methods, which were time-consuming, and cost as much as $14,000 for every mile of pipe we laid down.

But our new vacuum chamber device will do the same job for a fraction of that cost. The money we save will help keep your rates down. And the time we save will give our Commonwealth Edison engineers a chance to do a little more of that valuable experimentation.
